SEWAGE PLANT AGAIN FACES DIFFICULTIES

Old Problem Crops Up as Final Treatment Units Fail to Handle Full Load.

ENGINEERS CALLED BACK

Superintendent Says It Looks as If Present Method Will Not Be Satisfactory.

Mechanical difficulties have cropped up again at Mansfield's $300,000 sewage disposal plant.

The trouble lies in the aerator units, Superintendent J. R. Turner revealed today—a situation similar to that reported by J. P. Sotherland, Turner's predecessor, whose resignation was requested by Mayor Claude M. Hunter.

Engineers from the Doerr company, which installed the equipment, have been at the plant for two weeks, Turner revealed, but have not yet solved the difficulty.

Says Figures Not Encouraging.

"So far the figures are not encouraging, and it doesn't look as though the method of operating will be satisfactory," Turner said today.

The aerator units are tanks for final treatment of sewage. They are large tanks, through which air is forced under pressure and circulated by means of motor-driven paddles.

Sotherland had charged the electric motors were not of sufficient size to turn the paddles under full load of air. The paddles are supposed to turn against the air pressure to insure fullest aeration.

Turner, however, claims that the maximum air pressure, 5 cubic foot per gallon of sewage, is insufficient for proper treatment, even with the paddles operating at maximum speed, which causes an overload on the motors.

Sewage Bypassed.

As a result, Turner reported today, as much as five million gallons of sewage a week has been bypassed around the final tanks into Rocky Fork creek, only partially treated, because the aerator units could not handle it.

Turner said that Doerr engineers had removed some of the blades from two of the paddles, and were operating the third one as usual, as an "experiment."

Turner said he had tried reversing the paddles, to have them turn with the flow of air, as Sotherland had done before him, but was not satisfied with the results. It was explained that reversing the paddle equipment was tried, to speed up the agitation.

Turner said he had figures to show that the monthly cost of operations in the past three

New Westinghouse Head Visits Plant, Meets Executives

Frank B. Williams, jr., new vice president of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, who yesterday was named head of the merchandising division with headquarters in Mansfield, spent a short time yesterday at the plant, and will take charge actively either tomorrow or Thursday, it was learned today.

Williams, who succeeds Arthur E. Allen, who resigned effective yesterday, came to Mansfield with George Bucher, president of the company, and returned to Pittsburgh, company headquarters last night.

He met Westinghouse executives here yesterday, and was introduced to them by Allen. He said he planned to spend today and perhaps tomorrow with company executives in Pittsburgh.

Williams comes to Westinghouse from the Diehl Manufacturing company, Elizabeth, N. J.

Allen, who was in charge of the merchandising division for more than four years, has not announced his plans for the future.

Iowa Mayor Makes Dill Pickles As Campaign Favors.

CEDAR FALLS, Ia.—(AP)—You won't see any of Mayor C. N. McHugh's constituents smoking campaign cigars here, but a lot of them will be eating "campaign pickles."

With election due in April, the Mayor is favoring his candidacy for re-election by following his custom of the last few years of making dill pickles and giving them to his friends.

In Behalf of Mansfield's School Children

AN EDITORIAL

MANSFIELD voters are to be given another opportunity—next Tuesday—to approve the $550,000 school bond issue needed to qualify for a $450,000 federal grant, thus providing a million dollars for a public school improvement program in this city.

For a number of years Mansfield has been skating on thin ice, in the matter of public school safety.

This applies more particularly to John Simpson junior high school, corner Fourth and Bowman streets, which was erected in 1891 as a Senior high school and which has been used since 1926 as a makeshift junior high school.

Years ago the third floor auditorium in this building was condemned as unsafe for use and NOW THE ENTIRE THIRD FLOOR HAS BEEN ORDERED CLOSED FOR CLASSROOM PURPOSES!

Meanwhile Hedges school, in the southeast part of the city, has been required to serve temporarily as a partial junior high school, with ninth grade pupils required to go to John Simpson for one year before entering Senior high.

This has not only hampered the elementary school work at Hedges but has deprived these pupils of the continuity in studies and associations made possible by three years attendance in a building equipped as a junior high school.

Two new junior high school buildings are provided for in the carefully prepared plans which await favorable action on the bond issue proposal next Tuesday.

TWO NEW PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDINGS FOR WHICH MANSFIELD TAXPAYERS WILL PAY ONLY THE COST OF ONE—as the $450,000 required to erect and equip one of the new buildings will come as a federal grant which is not to be repaid and on which there is no interest charge.

Unless Mansfield takes advantage of the opportunity to get this federal grant THAT MONEY WILL GO ELSEWHERE AND MANSFIELD WILL BE THE LOSER, NOT ONLY IN PUBLIC SCHOOL FACILITIES BUT IN THE EXTRA EMPLOYMENT THAT WOULD RESULT, AND THE REQUIREMENT FOR MATERIALS, IN CONSTRUCTION OF THE TWO NEW BUILDINGS AND REMODELING OF OLD SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Mansfield has not kept pace with other Ohio cities in its population class in the matter of public school accommodations.

Present-day school children, boys and girls not yet of school age, babies that are having their first look at the world, and thousands yet unborn—all will benefit by the better schools made possible by this public school improvement program.

The small cost in taxes should weigh lightly against the safety, health and school opportunities of Mansfield's children.

The people of a city have no more important duty than to provide safe, sanitary and adequately equipped schools for the children of the community.

This is NOT now being done in Mansfield. IT CAN BE DONE BY PASSING THE SCHOOL BOND ISSUE NEXT TUESDAY!

HALF-DAY CLASS SCHEDULE SET UP FOR SIMPSON

Junior High Starts Curtailed Operations Wednesday as Result of State Order.

With nine of their classrooms on the third floor condemned by the Ohio department of industrial relations, 1,350 pupils in the John Simpson Junior high school will attend half-day sessions, beginning Wednesday.

The half-day schedule was ordered last night by the board of education after the state prohibited use of the rooms on the top floor of the 47-year-old building, condemning it as a fire hazard.

H. J. Dotson, principal of the John Simpson school, said class schedules would be speeded up and shortened so that courses would not have to be dropped from the curriculum during the emergency.

Half Go In Morning.

Half of the pupils will attend classes in the morning and the others in the afternoon under the new set-up.

School buses will be operated on a new schedule for pupils who must leave the school or their homes at noon, Supt. W. L. Miller said.

Extra-curricular activities will be reduced to a minimum and study periods will be eliminated at school. Pupils will be expected to do their studying at home, Dotson said.

Opening of school in the morning will be moved up from 8:22 to 8 a. m. and classes will continue until 4:03 p. m. the principal said. The school closes at 3:30 p. m. now.

Because it will not be necessary for any pupils to be at the building at noon, the cafeteria will be closed. The morning classes will close at 11:53 a. m. and the afternoon session will open at 12:10 p. m. There will be 12 class periods a day, six in the morning and six in the afternoon.

CAR HITS HOUSE

Damage $300 as Driver Loses Control in East Mansfield.

C. C. Chambers, New Philadelphia, escaped with minor bruises when his automobile crashed into a house in East Mansfield late yesterday, but damage to the residence and the car was estimated at more than $300.

The impact of the car was so great that the porch on the house was loosened and door frames were twisted, Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman said.

The residence, located at Wooster road and Bahl avenue, is occupied by Mrs. Elizabeth Harfman. Chambers agreed to pay for the damage to the home.

He told Freman that he lost control of the car which crossed a lawn and hit the corner of the house.

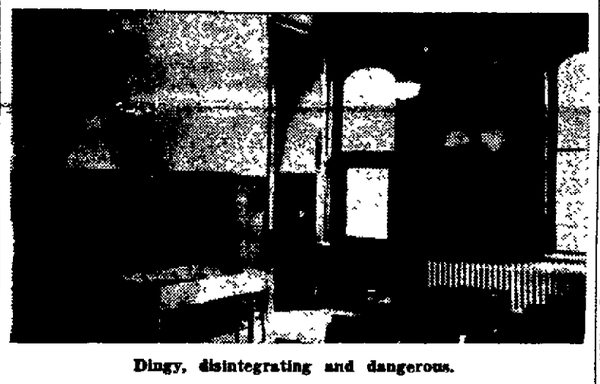
Pictures Tell it

Compare Present Schoolrooms to Kind Bond Issue Will Provide

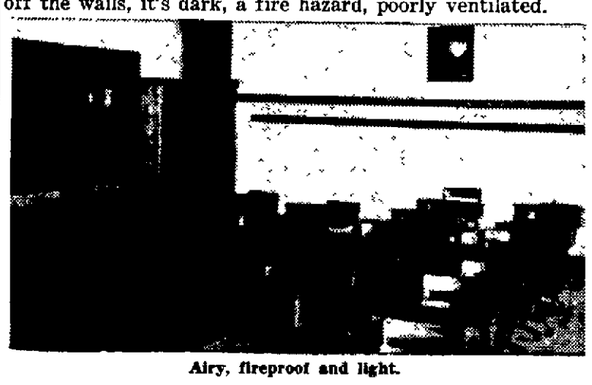
Someone—maybe it was a Chinese—is credited with saying that a picture is worth 10,000 words.

So here are four pictures—the equivalent of 40,000 words, if you agree with the Chinese—that tell a convincing story of Mansfield's school situation, and present a powerful argument for passage of the $550,000 bond issue at the special election next Tuesday.



Dingy, disintegrating and dangerous.

Above is a classroom at Hedges school, a building erected six years after the close of the Civil war. Plaster is coming off the walls, it's dark, a fire hazard, poorly ventilated.

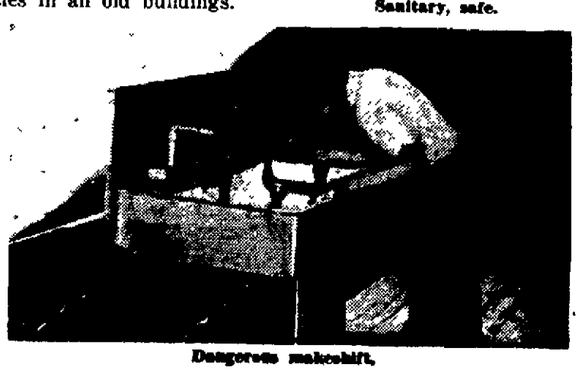


Airy, fireproof and light.

This is a modern classroom, at Woodland school, built in 1936. Well lighted, fireproof and well ventilated. The proposed new Johnny Appleseed and John Simpson Junior highs will have classrooms like this.

Sanitary, safe.

Drinking fountains aren't part of a school's fundamentals, but they're important. The little lady drinking at the right, is a pupil at Woodland. The fixtures are sanitary and safe. The boy at the bottom drinks from a makeshift fountain at Hedges. The exposed plumbing is antique, and dangerous. For instance, he might easily lose an eye, if he were getting a drink during school hours and were jostled by passing pupils against the protruding pipes. In addition to remedying such apparent defects, the school building program calls for modernization of toilet facilities in all old buildings.



Dangerous makeshift.

ASKS INQUIRY

Marriott to Present School Bus Case to Grand Jury.

County Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott said today he would ask the county grand jury to investigate an accident in which two small boys were injured last Thursday in front of their home on the Millsborough road.

The boys, Lester and Paul Baker, brothers, were struck by a car driven by Mrs. Walter F. Howell, Mansfield, who, state highway patrolmen said, drove past a standing school bus. One of the boys had just left the bus. Both of them suffered critical injuries and are in Mansfield General hospital.

Meanwhile, Marriott today had opened an investigation of a fatal accident in which Raymond Bull, 19, of near Fredericktown, was fatally injured Saturday night near Shelby.

The prosecutor questioned Newton C. Thomas, driver of the car in which Bull was riding, at his office this morning, and planned to question other witnesses today or Wednesday.

SUDETENS REPLY TO MARTIAL LAW EDICT WITH DEFI

Demand Termination of Military Rule By 11 P. M. Emergency Meeting of British Defense Chiefs Called In London.

LONDON—Sudeten leaders have given the Czech government a six-hour ultimatum to withdraw all "exceptional measures" in the Sudeten districts or the Sudetens will "decline all responsibility for the consequences," a Reuters dispatch from Prague said today.

The reported ultimatum apparently referred to martial law imposed on eight Sudeten district departments.

In the thick of dispatches telling of the Sudeten ultimatum, which calls for termination of martial law in Czechoslovakia by 11 p. m., British government leaders late today held a sensational meeting of defense chiefs and a fresh warning was issued to Germany by highest official quarters.

The Czechs were told, said a Reuters dispatch from Prague, that Sudeten leaders, besides saying they "would not be responsible" for the consequences if martial law was not lifted, added that the eight-point Carlsbad demands for complete Sudeten autonomy would no longer be adequate even for negotiations—a statement amounting to a formal demand for a plebiscite.

Brtain's four defense ministers were in conference with Prime Minister Chamberlain, who earlier had summoned a full dress cabinet meeting for tomorrow to consider the central European crisis. The four ministers are: Sir Kingsley Wood, air minister; Leslie Hore-Belisha, war secretary; Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty, and Sir Thomas Inskip, minister for co-ordination of defense. They were accompanied by their chiefs of staff.

Rush Back To London.

Awaiting them at the prime minister's office were Chamberlain and his "inner cabinet"—Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary; Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, and Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary.

The air minister had rushed back to London from Coventry, where he had been inspecting "shadow" airplane factories, an important item in Britain's war preparations.

Viscount Gort, chief of the army general staff, and Admiral Sir Roger Backhouse, first sea lord, and chief of the naval staff, were also among the conferees.

A summons for the cabinet to meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow was issued earlier by Chamberlain after he and his key ministers had pondered the text of the speech in which the fuehrer demanded the right of "self determination" for the Sudeten Germans.

The prime minister also consulted the ranking leaders of the opposition in the house of commons, a step customary in times

Nazis See Hitler Determined To Rule Over German Czechs

(By United Press)

NURNBERG—German Nazis looked beyond Adolf Hitler's Nurnberg address today and saw only one, inevitable end—the German absorption of 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans of Czechoslovakia.

The chancellor, as Nazis summarized his speech, stood firm against British and French pressure with a promise of aid when needed by the Sudeten Germans; he left the way open for peaceful settlement by admonishing the Prague government to negotiate an understanding with the Sudetens.

He did not in specific words say that armed force would be used to assure the right of "self determination" to the Sudetens; but he announced the building of great new fortifications on the French frontier.

The chancellor enunciated his policy, without narrating specific details of future action, in four portions of his 78-minute address closing the tenth annual Nazi party rally yesterday.

He said:

"What Germans demand is the right of self-determination which every other people possesses, and no phrases."

"I assure the democracies that the fate of the Sudetens is not a matter of indifference to us. If these harassed people feel they are without rights and aid, they will get both from us.

"I can assure you that since May 28 the most gigantic fortifications works of all time were begun in the west (on the French frontier). I can assure you the work will be completed before winter sets in."

Twenty-five thousand persons in the Nazi congress hall cheered long and frequently and millions of others by radio at home and abroad heard the speech, of which the purpose was summarized by one spokesman as.

"Gentlemen of Prague, negotiate but be quick about it!"

Germany Prepared to Take Up Arms, Says Goering's Paper

(By United Press)

BERLIN—Field Marshal Hermann Goering's own newspaper organ, commenting today on Adolf Hitler's speech at Nurnberg, asserted that Germany was prepared to take up arms if necessary to aid the German minority in Czechoslovakia.

The tenor of this and other comment in Germany was that it was up to Czechoslovakia to make concessions which will satisfy not only its German minority but Hitler personally, or, failing that, it is up to the powers of Europe to say whether they want to go to war to defend Czechoslovakia.

There seemed no alternative.

Goering's newspaper, National Zeitung, of Essen, took the lead as it has done in past occasions, in giving an unmistakably blunt interpretation of Hitler's speech at Nurnberg last night.

"The leadership of the German nation, and the entire German nation, is prepared and has pledged its word to take up arms if necessary to come to the aid of 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans," it said. "The German nation's demand is that Sudeten Germans be given what is due them . . . now, after the Fuehrer has spoken, may the cabinets of Prague, Paris and London see what lots they want to draw for the fate of European civilization from the folds of their democratic mentality."

The National Zeitung said:

"Mr. Benes lied to all Europe May 21 . . . Hitler drew the necessary conclusions from these base lies and these abominable tactics. Any attempt by the Prague government to disparage the German nation before the world and to lay responsibility for a world catastrophe at its door will encounter a reply of which the gentlemen in Prague have not dreamed."

Marriage In Secret Is Bad Start

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Secret Marriage.

Dear Miss Fairfax: The boy I have been going with for a long time wants me to marry him, secretly, about the end of the month and then each one of us go back home to live with our parents. This would probably have to be for almost four years.

When a girl and boy get married, they have every right in the world to live together. Now if we were secretly married, we would have to just be "going around together" and nothing more. We'd have disagreements and this would lead to quarrels, and it might even make a complete break. I don't want this to happen. Don't you agree with me that it's a mistake to marry and keep it a secret?

BETTY

Congratulations, my dear Betty, on seeing so clearly the difficulties of a secret marriage. I've never known one of them to turn out well, have you? To keep a marriage secret, "for almost four years," as you say, would be most unthinkable. You will have a much greater chance of happiness, it seems to me, if you both save and prepare for the home you can enjoy openly together.

Husband Refuses Request.

Dear Miss Fairfax: When we were first married I was so much in love that I insisted on doing all the work in our little five-room bungalow, even the laundry. It didn't seem so much for me to do, but pretty soon children came—we have three now—two girls and a boy. My husband makes good wages, and we could afford to get in help, but I still keep on doing everything.

Before we were married, he was all peaches and cream, now his delight seems to be in preventing me from having any good times. I am expecting another baby soon, and feel if I don't get a change before long, I may not come through the ordeal.

My mother wants me to bring the children and visit her for two weeks, so that I can have a rest. But my husband refuses to give his consent. Then my mother offered to come and do my work and take care of the children, but he doesn't think that is necessary. What would you advise that I do in my case?

TIRED MOTHER.

Why don't you put up the question of getting in extra help. If your husband objects to your going away, or to having her come to help you, he should at least get someone in to help you. I'd suggest you have the doctor talk to him, as well. When a woman's health and life hang in the balance, it is no time to obey a man's whim.

Some men act in this cruel way without realizing how utterly unreasonable they are Too much authority isn't good for folks.

Doesn't Answer Letters.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I met a certain girl of excellent standing, in an office where I go on business, and as we were properly introduced, I asked her out. She went with me several times, and she always seemed to enjoy herself with me.

When she left on her summer vacation—she's to be away six weeks—she gave me her address and asked me to write to her. When I wrote her, about a week after she had gone, it was only a friendly letter, and I told her that I missed her, and asked her to write to me. That has been two weeks ago, and I haven't heard from her yet. She surely received the letter, as I had my return on the outside.

I care very much for this girl, and would like to keep her friendship. Shall I write and ask her if anything is wrong, or would you, if you were me, wait until she returns and then call on her and see if she still cares for me? Please answer soon?

WORRIED.

Better wait until she returns to the office, as so much time has already elapsed. Scarce as men are at summer resorts, I don't believe you've anything to fear in the way of a rival. Very probably she just felt lazy about writing, as so many do when they're away on vacations.

Shines Surface

Wash oil cloth and table linoleums with warm water and a mild soap. Then rub over them with equal parts of cold water and skimmed milk. Wipe dry with a soft cloth. The surface will have added luster.

Cocktail tidbit for men: Spread crackers or toast bits with butter that has been creamed and mixed with a bit of minced parsley, celery and green peppers. Top with sardines combined with salad dressing. Garnish with tiny pearl onions.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"What is this—a besieged fortress?" Philip Veritzen queried when, without abating a jot of his usual elaborate courtesy, he had acknowledged my welcome greeting, which included a warning to be careful at the door.

There was an edge in his voice which I ignored in my answer.

"Something like that," I said lightly. "But do come over to the fire while I explain."

But he stood rigidly erect, not moving, and I sensed his antagonism to us. He did not know exactly what he was fighting, but his keen perception, honed by years of experience, told him that he was in a hostile atmosphere. Then his social training conquered, and he came with me to the fire, Dicky and Noel following, and Lillian came swiftly from the alvoce where she had been standing watching us, unobserved by the guests.

"Hello! Phil, Darling!" she said easily. "Ah! Noel! How good to see you both."

Philip Veritzen started perceptibly, and his eyes searched her face before he bent over her hand and kissed it in the continental fashion he affects. But whatever his thought he did not utter it, confining his words to a refusal of the chair Dicky proffered, although he indicated to Noel by a gesture that the patently weary young man should be seated.

Prefers to Stand.

"I perfer to stand," Noel's father said with a breath of frigidity in his manner when Noel had slumped, apparently much fatigued, into the chair Dicky set for him. "I have very little time, and much to settle. I am sure you will be willing to answer my questions, even if some of them sound impertinent."

"My Dear Mr. Veritzen," Dicky said with geniality so cleverly simulated that it almost deceived me, "surely you know we are at your service in anything that we can do for you."

"Ah! that's just it!" the great producer said. "You may decide that there are things you cannot do for me."

"Suppose you ask us first and see," I said with a placating smile, after I had waited vainly for Dicky to answer the thrust.

"Very well, I will," he said, drawing himself up to his full stature. "In the first place, are Queen Olga and the Princess Olina here with you?"

"Oh! yes," I said. "They are here and safe. But how clever of you to guess it! What made you think they had come here?"

He smiled grimly. "'Elemental, my dear—lady'," he paraphrased, but again giving his maddening little hesitation after the appellation, "dear" I know without looking that Dicky's fist was clenched—the fist itching with the desire to connect with Philip Veritzen's nose. "I came back to the hospital to find both my guests gone and a note from the queen saying that an urgent message concerning the throne had made it imperative for her to leave at once, and that she would write to me as soon as possible."

Father Has Authority.

His voice was vibrant with displeasure and wounded vanity, as he went on.

"There is only one person in the world who has the knowledge and the authority to send her such a message, and that is your father." He inclined his head in my derection. "And I know that your father considers this farm a sanctuary which he can adequately guard. There I disagree with him. I consider the situation of the royal women here to be distinctly percarious. I am pardoned for my thought, I hope."

"Go as far as you like," Dicky said carelessly, but with the veneer of his courtesy badly slipping.

"Thank you!" Mr. Veritzen returned, with a simlar edge to his voice.

"But the first thing which I wish to find out," he said, "is how it was possible for them to leave the hospital so quickly. I know the queen had no money to speak of, yet I found that her bills were paid in full. I had issued strict orders concerning her, and I want to find out who dared disobey my instructions. I did not have time for an investigation at the hospital, so I must take it up here. For that reason, I must ask to see Queen Olga immediately."

With an imperceptible little signal to me for silence, Lillian stepped into the fray.

"Why trouble Olga?" she asked. I'm the dame you want to see. I'm the guilty party."

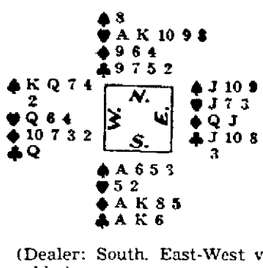
"The Authority on Authorities"

READ HIS MIND

As soon as a defender sees the dummy, he should try to figure out the way he would play the hand if he were the declarer. That is, basing his hypothetical scheme on what he believes the declarer probably holds, judging from the bidding. He may thus, in effect, read the declarer's mind and so manage to figure out moves that will thwart him.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

The bidding on this deal began with a call of 1-Diamond by South, to which North responded with 1-Heart. South's next bid was 2-No Trump and after 3-Hearts by North, South went to 3-No Trump.

West led the spade 4 against this contract and South allowed East's 9 to hold the trick East continued with the J and the 10. South won the latter He could then see seven tricks only and decided his best chance to obtain the extra two was to lead a heart and duck, with the hope that only one trick need by lost in that suit.

His plan was the correct one, but West upset declarer's hopes completely by placing the heart Q on the 2. This forced South to play the K, for West at that time held two set up spades and could not be allowed to hold the trick. The club 2 to the K was declarer's next play, and his second heart led to the dummy. He knew the contract was hopeless without the hearts, so finessed the 10, with the result that he took no more heart tricks.

Dewey, Given First Set-Back, Maps New Trial of Hines

COURT ORDERS MISTRIAL IN RACKETS CASE

14-Word Question Held to Be Violation of Rule of Law by Trial Justice.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Because of a 14-word question, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey must begin all over again his attempt to convict Tammany District Leader James J. Hines of selling political protection to the underworld.

Justice Ferdinand E. Pecora ordered a mistrial yesterday on the grounds that the youthful prosecutor by a verbal slip "fatally prejudiced" the jury against the white-haired political boss.

The decision nullified four weeks of exciting testimony by which Dewey had sought to prove that Hines had served as political go-between and protector of the Dutch Schultz mob.

It was certain, however, that Dewey, smarting under his most serious rebuff since he began his career in racket "busting," would force another trial.

One Question Does It.

The "break" that ended the first trial came last Saturday as Dewey was cross-examining Lyon Boston, former assistant district attorney. Questioning Boston on the testimony given by William Fellows Morgan, jr., city commissioner of markets, before a special grand jury, Dewey asked:

"Don't you remember any testimony about Hines and the poultry racket there by him?"

Lloyd Paul Stryker, 53-year-old defense attorney, immediately leaped to his feet and demanded a mistrial.

Ater deliberating over the weekend Justice Pecora upheld Stryker's contention that Dewey's question had violated a "deeply rooted" rule of law forbidding submission of evidence linking a defendant to a crime for which he is not standing trial.

Hines stepped out of the New York county courthouse yesterday to the acclaim of thousands.

Young Dewey took it all with his usual enigmatic smile, the same smile he wore—though somewhat wryly—when Justice Pecora announced his decision, and dismissed the jury.

Councilman Asks Removal of City Manager in Toledo

TOLEDO, O.,—(INS)—Removal of City Manager John N. Edy, today was asked by Councilman Addison Q. Thatcher.

The removal was asked first at last night's council meeting but was not acted upon because the majority of council agreed with Mayor Roy C. Start that Thatcher's "sealed envelope" method of introducing the removal resolution was not permitted by council rules.

Thatcher gave Lawrence Davis, council clerk, a sealed envelope Saturday, before the 11 a. m. deadline for resolutions to be acted upon at last night's meeting. Shortbefore council meeting he called Davis and asked that the envelope be opened.

The envelope contained resolutions for Edy's removal and the appointment of Harry L. Shepler, former Willys-Overland official in his place.

Thatcher said he wanted the change because he felt a Toledo man should have the job. Edy came here almost three years ago. He was selected by city council and the city manager league. He had held similar posts in California and Michigan.

ROOSEVELT AND FARMER CHAT

Ruralite Gets Promise on Farm Prices; President Stays Near Jimmy.

ROCHESTER, Minn. — (AP) — President Roosevelt resumed a close watch on the condition of his son, James, today after an impromptu roadside chat in which he pledged he would do everything possible to lift farm crop prices.

Mr. Roosevelt visited his eldest son and secretary, a patient at the Mayo clinic, three times yesterday. James underwent an operation for a gastric ulcer Sunday and his condition has been reported satisfactory since.

However, hospital attaches said that James' operation was such that several days would be necessary to ascertain that he definitely was on the road to recovery.

In between visits to the hospital, the president went for a long drive over rain-sodden dirt roads.

Stephen Early, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, reported today that the chief executive's car had been slowed to a walking pace by the mire. Finally, Early said, the president decided to stop in front of a farm house.

An elderly farmer, who did not give his name, came out and chatted with the president. He discussed agricultural problems for 20 minutes and finally asked point-blank what Mr. Roosevelt planned to do to lift farm prices. The president gave the farmer his promise he would do everything possible.

DRAFTS $100,000 PWA PROJECT FOR RESURFACING COUNTY ROADS

Plans for a $100,000 PWA project for resurfacing 91 miles of "black-top" roads in Richland county were being mapped today by County Engineer Howard C. Sword.

The engineer said the project, if approved by county commissioners and PWA officials, would put a number of men to work next spring and would give the county three major work relief programs.

A $1,000,000 WPA road, bridge and street program already is under way and a second WPA project calling for the expenditure of $103,000 on ditch and flood control work was approved last week by President Roosevelt.

Sword said the proposed PWA road project is in line with plans being set up by nearly 60 other counties in Ohio at the suggestion of the Ohio Better Roads association. Plans must be submitted to the regional PWA office before Oct. 1.

The association, he added, is urging the use of PWA funds for roads because the WPA projects eliminate the road contractors on county road jobs. On PWA projects, the construction contract is let to the low bidder who must employ as many men as possible from lists provided by National Re-employment offices.

Sword said he believed the PWA plan would be more adequate for the "black-top" road projects since the largest cost involved is for materials. In WPA projects, the prinicipal cost is for labor, while the cost of materials is comparatively small, he pointed out.

CONTAGION OFF

August Healthiest Month of Year, Rehder Says.

Contagious disease in Mansfield during August dropped to a new low for the year, the monthly report of Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, showed today.

The largest increase was shown in venereal diseases with 20 cases listed out of 33 cases of communicable diseases reported for the month.

The report also revealed that there were six cases of whooping cough, three each of tuberculosis and typhoid fever and one case of scarlet fever.

Twenty-six persons died last month in the city to bring the total deaths since Jan. 1 to 285.

Births totaled 47 to bring the total for the year to 514, Dr. Rehder said.

FIREMEN WORK TWO HOURS TO RESCUE LIVING

Vehicles Collide Head-on While Traveling on Rain-Soaked Pavement.

(By Associated Press)

OXFORD, Mass.—Six persons were killed and 13 others injured, several seriously, today when a New York-Boston bus and a truck-trailer collided almost head-on on a rain-swept highway.

The impact was heard a quarter-mile away by a restaurant proprietor who notified state police and a doctor.

The bus overturned and blocked the highway. Fuel tanks of both vehicles burst but the gasoline did not catch fire.

It took firemen two hours to extricate the dead and injured from the wreckage, pulling them through shattered windows.

Four Identified.

Four of the dead were identified as Albert Roscoe, 45, of Medford, and Margaret Hogan, 65, David Cohen and Mary Sumner, all of Boston.

Another dead woman, about 40, was unidentified at Worcester hospital, and a man was unidentified at a funeral parlor in nearby Charlton.

Henry Brown, 23, of Hanover, described by police as the truck driver, was in critical condition at Worcester City hospital.

Theron Dustin, of Melrose told police, who said he was the bus driver, that he "did not know what happened." He also was a Worcester City hospital patient. His injuries were described as not serious.

The truck, owned by the Henry Jenkins Transportation company, Boston, was bound for Springfield and the bus for Boston.

TANK EXPLODES, 1 DIES

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—A gasoline tank explosion following the collision of a truck and an automobile burned to death an unidentified man today on the Pittsburgh-Steubenville, O., highway. A woman, also unidentified, was critically burned.

The couple, occupants of the automobile, were trapped when the tank burst into flames as the truck crashed into the rear of their machine during a heavy rain.

Steve Polonchas, 28, of Steubenville, identified by State Motor Patrolman A. George Cohan as the driver of the truck, was held for a coroner's investigation. Polonchas was cut and bruised slightly.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Louisiana Paper Exhibits Unusual Spirit, Gouges Taxpayers to Laud Mayor

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—There has been another outpouring of the proper spirit in the columns of the Daily Progress, of Hammond, La., originally the official organ of Huey Long's dictatorship and now the equivalent of Mussolini's Il Popolo D'Italia in the regime of Governor Dick Leche. The Progress has issued a special edition of 60 pages to solemnize the second anniversary of the reign of Mr. Bob Maestri as conqueror and mayor of New Orleans.

Since the anschluss of New Orleans and the happy compromise with President Roosevelt, Jim Farley, the Treasury and justice departments, known as the second Louisiana purchase, the Progress has smoothed out many of its earlier technical journalistic crudities and is now qualified to goose-step with its contemporaries in the Rome-Berlin axis.

The tribute to Mr. Maestri fittingly maintains a modest position two paces to the rear of that which was published some time ago to celebrate Governor Leche's first anniversary as governor. On that occasion, the Progress obtained whole page advertisements of Louisiana State university, a state insane asylum, Charity hospital of New Orleans and the Shreveport Charity hospital, none of which seemed to require the stimulus of paid advertising.

There were also page advertisements of the Louisiana congressional delegation, the Louisiana supreme court, the New Orleans Board of Levee commissioners, the State Conservation commission, the New Orleans Port commissioners, the State Highway commission, the State Board of Health and the cities of Baton Rouge, Hammond and Lake Charles. In one municipality, wrong-minded citizens struck a note of disharmony in the paean by legally enjoining the payment of $500 out of local taxes for a note in the chorus of praise in the Progress. But otherwise the edition was a joyous and unmitigated homage to the heir to the Kingfish.

The advertisements and text in the Maestri memorial edition are a melodious blending of obvious cause and inevitable effect. The text tells of great material achievements in New Orleans, which consumed vast quantities of steel, gravel, roofing, restaurant and hotel supplies for the kitchens of public institutions, hardware and building equipment, drainage tile, concrete and machinery. The advertisements convey hearty greetings from many admiring individuals and by no means soulless corporations dealing in such commodities.

There are tributes, in the truest sense of the word, not only from the well-advised in all such lines of commerce but from the state prize fight commission, the policemen and firemen of New Orleans, the State Conservation department, the Public Service corporation, the Power and Light company, the state Board of Health, the river pilots, the State Tax commission and the Levee board among many others.

Bankers, members of a group often accused of unwisdom, ingratitude and lack of generosity, refute these foul aspersions with lavish purchases of space next in which to make obeisance to the lowercase duce. And the loan sharks of New Orleans, those ever-ready altruists who tided over the city employes in spells of payless pay days when blood was on the moon at Baton Rouge, express no less endearingly their homage.

Hammond, the home of the Progress, is a town rising 6,000 people, but the advertising staff of this journalistic prodigy is the envy of the whole profession. It takes but a hint from a Progress man to sell a page or half-page of space to certain types of clients at times when flattery is in the wind. The circulation branch, too, displays something akin to wizardry. The subscription list might be used as a poster of all those drawing pay from the state, parish and municipal governments of Louisiana, the school and highway systems and the federal personnel.

That it costs money to praise Mr. Maestri in the Progress goes without saying.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Some of these movie people don't have to worry about any balmy old-age pension scheme. Most of them would swap the hope of thirty-every-Thursday like this—snap!—just for a one-way ticket into a healthy, active movie "family series."

Once he's in, he's as hard to get off the payroll as a relative with the inside dope on the producer. And these comfortable niches, the equivalent of life-time berths for actors, are multiplying as the weeks go by.

The Jones Family has kept Jed Prouty and Spring Byington busy for three years now—and they're both free to take outside pictures when they come. Lewis Stone has a lifetime assignment in Judge Hardy, and that Hardy family will never be complete if Mickey Rooney leaves it, or Cecilia Parker either.

The Gleasons—Jimmy, Lucile, and Russell—have just put forth another family in "The Higginses." It's a first, may be a series. And the popularity of the Beebes in the Crosby film, "Sing You Sinners," argues for a continuation of that group to include Mamma Elizabeth Patterson and Brothers Bing, Fred MacMurray and Donald O'Connor.

WHERE they haven't families in this new studio craze, they have the "equivalent in what amounts to old-time serial stuff—with a difference. The old serials of the late Pearl White's era were two-reelers, each episode leaving its heroine dangling from a cliff or caught in the mangle at the laundry or facing some such fate worse than death. Today's are features, telling their story at one sitting, but saving the characters for further use in sequels.

This type is flourishing. Bonita Granville is set for a long time to come as Nancy Drew, the girl detective. So is Frankie Thomas, her youthful vis-a-vis—contracted on his assurance that his adolescent voice won't change before they've trapped the last crook. Lucille Ball as Annabelle the Movie Queen won't be idle either. With her press-agent Jack Oakie she is already involved in further laughable adventures—but when Oakie's contract expires she may have to get a new P. A. Those things can't be predicted.

EVEN Lew Ayres, his come-back as a John Barrymorish comedian a hit, is going to be a serial king. For miles of reelage ahead he's slated to play "Dr. Kildare" in a series by Max Brand on adventures in and about a hospital. Sort of a "Bulldog Drummond" thing, planned to go on as long as the traffic will bear it. And "Drummond" seems to be holding up, too.

Adventures of one sort and another are all planned ahead as series. Two "sports adventures"—with Henry Armetta and Inez Palange as carry-over comedy characters—already have been made. June Lang and Lynn Bari are set as the "Big Town Girls." Michael Whalen and Chic Chandler are those "Roving Reporters," and Brian Donlevy and Wally Vernon are the "Camera Daredevils."

All these pictures are givng actors "permanent" berths—as "permanence" goes in Hollywood.

Murphy Points Tygers for West, Not Massillon

Mansfield Coach Has Worries Enough Prepping Club for Cowboys Without Thinking of Tigers.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

PREPARATIONS for Saturday's inaugural with Akron West were stepped up today as Coach J. Russell Murphy intimated that he was far from satisfied with the way the Tygers have conducted themselves on the practice field at Mansfield high school.

The squad has shown flashes of power in scrimmages, but the team as a whole lacks the balance of the once-defeated 1937 edition.

Lack Experience.

There is every indication to believe that the Men of Murphy will develop into a formidable outfit as they have shown possibilities of greatness, but their lack of game experience is likely to handicap them in their early appearances.

Because only a few of the candidates saw service to amount to anything last fall, Murphy is still undecided as to the opening day lineup. However, Capt. Rich Nagle, Al Schwaner, Dick McMullen and Ike Smith stack up as possible starters in the backfield, but none has a berth cinched.

The forwards so far in the drills have not displayed the aggressiveness that Murphy demands of a line, and there may be plenty of changes in the personnel of this department before the desired results are achieved.

The backfield has not escaped Murphy's criticism, either. There are enough flaws in the ball-toting division to make a coach's hair turn gray, according to the Tyger leader.

Although the Massillon game is less than two weeks in the distance, Murphy has had no time to even think about the invasion of the Tigers.

One at a Time.

Murphy is concentrating on West, not Massillon. He figures he will be in a better position to lay plans for the defending state champions after he has an idea how the Tygers look in action against the Akronites.

There is too much work to be accomplished for the first game to keep the coaching staff's mind off Massillon.

Murphy said he learned much in the scrimmage with ex-high school stars last week-end and yesterday he started remedying some of the defects of this appearance.

Printing Star Succeeds Oberlander as President.

Harry Schlegel was elected president of The News-Journal Class A golf league at the annual banquet held at the Possum Run clubhouse last night. He succeeds V. H. Oberlander.

Pete Linster was re-elected secretary-treasurer at the business meeting at which the retiring president presided.

Both Schlegel and Linster were members of the Richland Printing team, which won the league championship this season. Bill Kuhn, backer of the team, received the trophy in behalf of the Printers at the presentation made by Oscar Ruhl of The News-Journal.

Carl Kushin was revealed as the scoring champion of the league at the banquet. He averaged 36.68 strokes during the season. Linster was second with a 36.80 average, with Vin Malaska third with a 37.

Jennie Reindl entertained the golfers with several accordion solos.

Scott Shifted To Halfback

COLUMBUS—(INS)—A stiff drill in offensive play was on the docket for Ohio State football aspirants today as Coach Francis Schmidt bore down and drove the boys hard in preparation for the opening game, Oct. 1, with Indiana.

A noticeable change in the Schmidt plan yesterday was the switching of Don Scott, Canton sophomore flash, from quarterback to left halfback.

Scott and Mike Kabealo, co-captain and right halfback, went through a fast passing workout and indicated they may turn in some good slinging performances when actual combat begins.

Ohioan Sets Pace in U. S. Amateur at Oakmont

By JUDSON BAILEY

OAKMONT, Pa.—(AP)—Chips were down today at Oakmont, the old ogre of golf and as usual under such circumstances Johnny Goodman, the bland-faced bridegroom, was in there dealing for the national amateur championship

Having his worst year in a long golfing career the defending champion came through yesterday's firing four strokes off the first round pace for medalist honors with a steady effort worth the attention of the other 123 contenders left in the field They are shooting for 64 spots in the match play bracket Johnny splashed through a near cloudburst at a 39-37—76

Unruffled by the weather he scrambled out of the pinches as dexterously as he ever did in beating Bobby Jones in that first great upset at Pebble Beach in the 1929 amateur, or in the national open he won at North Shore five years ago

Arrayed against him today were all but one of the five other one-time amateur kings who set forth yesterday in the 18-hole first half of the qualifying test all of his fellow Walker Cuppers, except Charles Kocsis and Francis Ouimet who passed up the battle and a spread of the nation's other best known amateurs.

At the top was another young veteran bespectacled Maurice McCarthy of Cincinnati, who won the national intercollegiate championship a decade ago while at Georgetown and added to his fame by beating George Von Elm at Merion Pa., in 1930 in the record overtime match winning on the 10th extra hole

McCarthy wrote a 37-35—72 right alongside the par figures, behind him came golfers whose scores ranged upward to 94 Art Doering, jr Stanford student from Chicago and low amateur in the 1938 open at Denver, came closest. He had a 73

Altogether there were 74 scores of 80 or better and 124 with 81 or better the figure at which the United States Golf association's tournament committee limited the field for the second session to insure time for possible playoffs.

When the last operation on the original field of 163 was performed the casualties included but two names of repute One was Charles F. (Chick) Evans of Chicago, who has been appearing in the national championship for 29 years. With an 85 Evans missed out by a single stroke

The other was elongated Ellsworth Vines world's professional tennis champion He had an 86

The "unknowns" who remained equalled only the "knowns" who departed. There was Frank Stiedle, former caddy and present Arkansas champion, with a 74. Another was Steve Kovach, a steelworker in a suburban Pittsburgh mill, with a 75.

Studding the list elsewhere were the Walker Cup contingent, including Charley Yates, the British open champion, with a 74; Ray Billows, 75; Reynolds Smith, 74; Fred Haas, 75. Marvin Ward, 76, and John Fischer, 76.

Robertson blasted out a 612 to lead the American Legion to a pair of victories over the Tracy & Avery club.

The defending champion Liederkranz club led the team scoring with a 2641 total, which enabled it to take two wins from the Baku Grotto. The Mansfield Savings Bank team won two games from the J. A. C. entry.

Bob, Helen Lose At Forest Hills

FOREST HILLS—(AP)—All was more or less chaos in the national tennis championships today, what with both Bobby Riggs, the nation's No. 2 star, and Helen Jacobs, its grandest feminine competitor, dusting themselves off and wondering why the engineer didn't blow his whistle.

The two were slapped down yesterday. Riggs got his lumps from Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., of Washington, D. C., who was mistakenly ranked No. 19 in the country last year, and Helen fell apart before the thumping left-hand drives of Margot Lumb of England, who is the world's greatest woman squash player.

Riggs, who was expected to play Jack Bromwich of Australia in the semi-finals, recovered sufficiently to say it would be a great lesson to him.

Hunt, whose previous claim to immortality was the fact he got to the finals of the intercollegiate championships against Gene Mako in 1934, played some beautiful tennis against Riggs. The scores: 6-2, 0-6, 9-7, 0-6, 6-4.

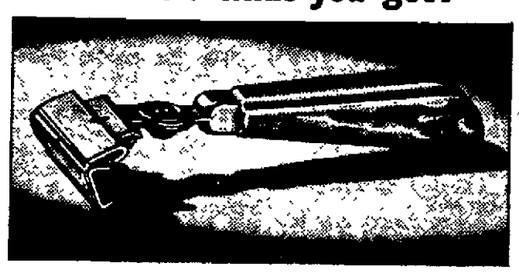
Hunt's opponent in the quarter-finals tomorrow will be Gene Mako, another unseeded Cinderella, who called his shot by trimming Franjo Puncec of Yugoslavia, 6-2, 6-4, 9-7.

In blowing Miss Jacobs off the court, 7-5, 6-2, Margot Lumb revealed that she has developed into a dangerous tennis contender.

MEN OF THIS CITY PROVE— THEY KNOW A BARGAIN!

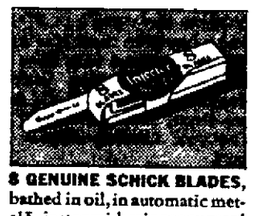
Thousands of local men have found new shaving comfort since last week, when the shaving buy of the year was announced! Quick to recognize a bargain, they jumped at this opportunity!

Here's what you get!



GENUINE SCHICK INJECTOR RAZOR

Exactly the same famous razor now nationally advertised and sold in the De Luxe Kit (with a cartridge of 20 Blades) for . . . $2.00



8 GENUINE SCHICK BLADES, bathed in oil, in automatic metal Injector with trigger control for changing blades without touching them. No other razor has this patented method for quick, safe blade changing.

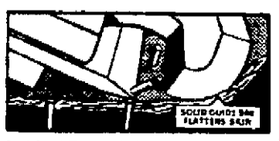
LIFEBUOY SHAVING CREAM, GIANT TUBE. Holds 52% more moisture than ordinary lather. Soaks whiskers soft. Soothes skin. Same as now selling for . . . . . 25¢

ALL THREE FOR THE "GIVE-AWAY" PRICE OF.. 59¢

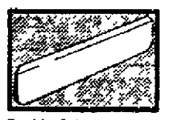
The allotment for this city is only enough for 1 out of 12 men. After the supply is exhausted the regular price for each item of the combination will again prevail.

WHY MORE THAN A MILLION MEN (ALREADY) HAVE SWITCHED TO SCHICK INJECTOR RAZOR

OLD-STYLE SHAVE . . . The combing "teeth" of this razor guard are not designed to stretch the skin taut enough ahead of the blade edge—and have a tendency to "ridge" the skin surface. Blade can nick the top of ridges, cause bleeding and smarting. And, because whisker bends over as blade strikes it, the razor seems to "pull."



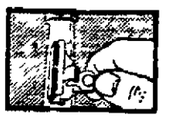
SCHICK INJECTOR SHAVE . . . Designed to flatten and stretch the skin, the Schick guide bar is solid, has no "teeth." Skin is stretched taut, giving a smooth shaving surface. Whiskers are held stiffly upright so blade can cut them cleanly at the skin line. Result: no nicks, no pull . . . even "against the grain."



Double-Thick Blades... Schick Blades are able to take a sharper edge and hold it. Each blade individually honed, stropped, inspected. More shaves per blade.

Sealed in a bath of oil in a metal cartridge. The blade edges are actually suspended in space, no paper covering which might rub and dull them

Automatic Blade Change! Give the "trigger" a pull and push—out shoots old blade, in goes a fresh one! Not to mention unwrap, unscrew, twist or reassemble.



A rinse and it's clean! Save minutes every day. No need to wipe and dry the Injector Razor after every shave . . . a flush under the faucet and it's ready to put away.

LIFEBUOY SHAVING CREAM

For Toughest Beards—For Tenderest Skins

Lifebuoy's extra moist, soothing lather takes all the "yumph" out of wiry whiskers—because it soaks them soft. Grand for tender skins, too, because it's 20% milder than other leading shaving soaps. There are 120 to 150 smooth, clean, FRESH shaves in the big red tube.

The Best Shaving Cream You Can Buy
Plus the World's Finest Razor
With 8 Blades in Automatic Injector

AT THE "GIVE-AWAY" PRICE OF 59¢

NOTICE TO ALL DEALERS: Any dealer in the Mansfield trading area regularly selling shaving preparations or razors may secure this deal by applying to his jobber, to Lever Brothers Company, Cambridge, Massachusetts, or to the Magazine Repeating Razor Company, Bridgeport, Connecticut.

BRIDES CHOOSE 'HOUSE FOR TWO' COLOR SCHEMES

'Dream Houses' Have Easily Cleaned Surfaces in Decorating Contest.

CHICAGO—Though there is no navigation record to the effect, some 300 dream ships were recently brought into port here. The occasion was the awarding of prizes to winners in the House for Two "dream house" decorating contest conducted by Carson Pirie Scott and company, department store. The bride's own idea of an ideal home, her choice of colors and materials surprised everyone.

Last April, Carson's invited the city's coming and current brides to see their empty four-room house, plan furnishings, wall colors. With money no consideration and the sky the limit, some 300 blushing brides equipped with floor plans, charts, swatches went to work. No professional decorators allowed, strictly a voice of the people, the little women each spent about four weeks haunting the store's aisles, learned to know all of the merchandise marked with the blue bell, asked hundreds of salespeople thousands of questions, planned every detail from the kind of enamel for the kitchen woodwork to the glass shelf over the bathtub.

Three prominent judges, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Agnes Foster Wright, editor of Brides Magazine, Richardson Wright, editor of House and Garden, awarded first prize of $500 to Mrs. John Marshall Ling.

Blue for Kitchen.

Sensibly visionary, Mrs Ling chose Mexican blue enamel for the pilaster type woodwork of her dream kitchen, with baseboard and molding to match. The solid-color linoleum with simple cream border is the same. Mexican placques and a tray provide the color scheme. White enameled cabinets have blue work surfaces, with lower shelf of upper cabinets in bright chili red. To further maintain the Rio Grande atmosphere, blue flowered tops trim white enameled canisters, blue and red flowers are painted on the "weathered" white wood of a rush-seated chair, bunches of bright grasses hang heads downward on either side of the net-curtained window, and a basket of russet red fruit stands near the sink.

Pastel-toned is the dining room. The pale gray of the wall sets off the white enameled woodwork. Lemony yellow facing on white sheer curtains repeats the pale yellow facing used on white taffeta drapes at the alcove, opposite, a team-time rendezvous set with drop-leaf Sheraton and two chairs. Pale rose in glassware, china and linens, echo the rose of the rug. Old mahogany host and hostess chairs are covered in pale yellow

Believing small, dark rooms should be seen through rose-colored glasses, Mrs Ling had the hall and closet floors done in rose, the walls of the closet in rose, and the hall painted white. Linens match the hall and closet colors as they do the bathroom scheme.

In the bathroom, the floor is solid rose toned, while shower curtains and drapes are white with rose binding, mat and towels are rose and the rug is woolly white.

MORE PARKS CREATED

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Cities, counties and states are setting aside more and more land for the recreation of their citizens. The National Park Service's annual yearbook reports that 35,111 acres of land and water were added to non-federal park holdings in the year ended last September.

INDUSTRIALS IN FRONT AS LIST EXTENDS GAINS

Market Improves in Face of Continued Nervousness Over Sudeten Situation.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(AP)—A wave of selling hit the stock market in mid-afternoon today following reports of a more anxious situation in Czechoslovakia. Within a few minutes, the tape was four minutes behind with prices a few cents to around $3 a share lower.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Rallying tendencies persisted in the stock market today, with the general list duplicating yesterday's gains of 1 to more than 3 points. This was in the face of continued nervousness abroad in the wake of Chancellor Hitler's bristling speech at Nunberg.

Reports of unrest in Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia, brought further declines in major European currencies and security markets. The British pound again hit a new three-year low, carrying other foreign exchanges into low ground for the move.

Stocks generally were higher at the opening with blue-chips showing large gains. The advance gained momentum until light profit-taking was encountered in the second hour, which shaded the day's best prices.

Industrials were strongest, including motors, tobaccos, chemicals, coppers and assorted high-priced shares.

Lone Star cement was up close to 4 points at one time, while Eastman Kodak, DuPont, Johns-Manville, Case, Westinghouse, and Sears Roebuck showed extreme gains of 2 or more points. These were pared before the noon hour.

Montgomery Ward was up a point, but lost all of its gain later.

CITY ESCAPES STORM'S BRUNT

Rainfall in Other Sections of State Heaviest in Years; Lightning Kills Boy.

in the state. Nearly five and a half inches of rain fell in four hours at Lancaster. At Columbus the fall was estimated at three inches.

Lightnnig killed Thomas Harrison, 8, at Cleveland as he stood under a tree. It also struck homes in Cleveland, Columbus, Zanesville and Lancaster, and light and telephone lines were down in the central and eastern parts of the state.

Street lights were out for nearly two hours last night in the southern and southwestern parts of Mansfield after lightning blew out two fuses in lines of the Ohio Public Service company.

R. D. Iden, distribution superintendent of the power company, said reports of damaged transformers had been received from scattered sections of the county. The damage was slight, however, he added.

Two creeks went on a rampage in Lancaster, flooding 100 homes. Firemen in boats rescued families in the flood district.

Richland county farmers are believed to have escaped heavy crop damage, since rainfall was less here than in some sections and there was no heavy wind.

The storm dropped temperatures several degrees after a high of 90 was recorded yesterday in Mansfield. It was 75 at noon today.

ROOSEVELT AND HULL STUDYING HITLER SPEECH

Receive Secret Reports From Foreign Diplomats on Peace, War Status in Europe.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull studied Adolf Hitler's Nurnberg speech and secret reports from U. S. diplomats abroad today in an effort to determine whether peace or war is immediately ahead for Europe.

Ambassadors to France, Great Britain, and Germany cabled to Hull their impressions and the impressions of other governments toward Hitler's defiance of Democratic nations and his demand for "self-determination" for 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia.

Hull relayed the reports to the president at Rochester, Minn., who, although his son James underwent a serious operation Sunday, is following the crisis closely.

There was no official reaction to Hitler's declaration at the state department, but an undercurrent of relief prevailed in all quarters. Hull did not listen to the speech, but members of his staff who did, made notes and kept him advised.

Far From Solved.

Feeling here was that the issue was far from solved; that a new crisis might arise at any moment from clashes in Czechoslovakia, or border incidents.

"The problem is far from seteled," one official said. "We know that nothing is going to happen right now. We do not know what may occur in the future, nor how soon."

Sen. Rush D. Holt, D., W. Va., feared the United States' policy because "there are too many men who were in the save-the-world-for-Democracy movement during the World war who are connected with our foreign policy now."

2 LOSE DRIVING RIGHTS FOR YEAR

Autoists Also Fined $50 Each, Plead Guilty to Driving While Intoxicated.

Driving rights of two autoists were revoked for one year and each was assessed fines of $50 and costs when they pleaded guilty in municipal court today to charges of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Two other motorists arraigned on other charges paid a total of $22 and costs when they pleaded guilty to violation of the traffic code.

The two whose driving rights were revoked were Melvin L. Swihart, 38, of Batemantown, and Paul Crouse, R. D. 2, Shiloh.

Swihart was arrested Sunday on U. S. route 30-S, by Deputy Sheriff Glenn P. Freeman, who testified that the driver "was all over the road." Crouse was arrested in Shiloh yesterday by the mayor of the village.

Garland Howard, Hartville, was fined $20 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle with insufficient lights.

James Elliot, R. D. 2, Mansfield, was fined $2 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of permitting his automobile to be driven by a person without a license. State highway patrolmen who arrested Elliot on route 39, north of Mansfield yesterday, said he had permitted his wife, who did not have a permit, to operate the machine.

U. S. DEVELOPS ANTI-TANK GUN

They're Designed to Wipe Out Any Enemy Offensive.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— General Malin Craig, army chief of staff, said today the army has developed new anti-tank guns, improvements of foreign models, which would wipe out any enemy tank offensive.

He said he believed the American gun, a 37-millimeter mobile unit, was unequalled in the world.

With an extremely high muzzle velocity, it has an overwhelming fire power at long range.

HALT TRUCKS ON OMAHA ROADS

Pickets Blockade All Roads As 5,000 Vote to Strike.

OMAHA, Neb.—(U.P.)—The International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs sent out "flying squadrons" of pickets today to blockade all highways leading into Omoha and halt cross-country freight trucks operated by approximately 180 companies.

Thomas Smith, secretary of the union, local 554, an affiliate of the said 35 men had been assigned to the blockade. 60 LOSE JOBS

Economy Wave Hits Highway Division at Ashland.

ASHLAND—Sixty laborers in the Ashland district of the state highway department were to be notified today that they would be laid off as a part of the administration's economy movement, it was announced here. Dispatches said 57 others would be dropped in the Lima district and 104 in Toledo.

R. O. Parrott, assistant resident engineer at Ashland, said that reduction in workers was prompted by the failure of the gasoline tax to provide the revenue anticipated. The layoffs will reduce the Ashland personnel one-third and will curtail the program considerably, Parrett added.

Dispatches from Columbus today said employes whose pre-primary campaign activities fell short of the Davey administration's expectation have been summoned to a conference in Columbus Thursday with Mrs. Myrna Smith, the governor's secretary.

TYDINGS VICTOR, 'PURGE' FIZZLES

Lewis, Roosevelt Candidate, Falls Behind; Dems Fail to Unseat Maine G. O. P.

was one of the two which President Roosevelt lost.

Although New Dealers had held some hope of winning at least one of those Maine offices, they were disheartened principally by the growing lead of Senator Tydings in the Maryland Democratic primary.

Holds Substantial Lead.

The 48-year-old senator, whom Mr. Roosevelt had denounced as a "betrayer" of the New Deal, was running ahead of Rep. David J. Lewis in most of the state.

Returns from 789 of 1,288 precincts gave Tydings: 119,168, and Lewis 81,999.

In several counties on the eastern shore, where Mr. Roosevelt praised Lewis as a pioneer in social legislation, Tydings was rolling up leads of two and three to one. A third candidate, Arthur E Hungerford, trailed.

The popular vote in Maryland does not actully determine the party choices. These will be made later in a convention in which each county and each Baltimore election district has from three to seven votes. The unit votes go to the candidate who wins a majority in the county.

Since Maine's reputation as a political barometer has suffered somewhat in recent years, the Maryland primary drew a great share of national attention in yesterday's voting because of Mr. Roosevelt's direct efforts to replace conservatives with liberals in congress.

Georgians watched the Maryland race for any bearing it might have on their own primary tomorrow, in which Senator Walter F. George also is seeking renomination over the president's opposition.

An Atlanta audience, which heard George pledge himself last night ot combat "arrogant, intolerable bureaucracy," whistled and yelled at an announcement that Tydings was ahead.

George is running against Lawrence S. Camp, Mr. Roosevelt's choice, and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge. William G. McRae, backed by advocates of the Townsend old-age pension program, withdrew from the field last night and gave his support to Camp.

The Townsend program was an issue in Maine, too. All three incumbent congressmen had Townsend support.

MAPS PROGRAM

State to Submit $15,000,000 Highway Plan to U. S.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The state highway department has announced that a huge federal-state road construction and improvement program was almost ready for submission to PWA officials.

The program, said to call for $15,000,000, will be financed with federal aid, via PWA, a highway department spokesman said.

"Some federal money will be available for Ohio," the spokesman said, "and a program whereby the state would provide 45 per cent of the cost and PWA the other 55 per cent is being prepared."

Deadline for applying for PWA funds under the president's New Recovery program is Sept. 30 with the provision the work must be started before the first of the year.

THEY'LL DEBATE

Bulkley Takes Up Challenge Sent by Taft, G. O. P. Foe.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—A debate on the New Deal and governmental issues between Ohio's candidates for United States senator became a distinct possibility today.

Robert A. Taft, Republican nominee for senator and an avowed conservative, issued the challenge to debate and U. S. Senator Robert J. Bulkley, renominated by Democrats, promptly accepted.

"I haven't received his letter yet," Sen. Bulkley said today. "Of course, it may be in the mail. But I want to debate him, and I'm sure some fair terms can be arranged. I am glad that Mr. Taft thinks it's important for us to debate in view of the fact that it took him two weeks to answer the City club's request that we meet before that forum. I answered, agreeing, in the return mail."

PLANT FACES NEW TROUBLE

Final Sewage Treatment Units Unable to Handle Full Load, Superintendent Says.

months had doubled the monthly cost of operations in the first five months of this year.

He attributed a part of the cost to a chlorinating process now in operation in the final tanks. The chlorine was placed in the return line and acted as a sterilizer to accomplish part of the job that should be taken care of by the plant equipment, he said.

His figures showed that the percentage of sewage fully treated at the plant, which reached a peak of 90 per cent in May had dropped to an average of 60 per cent. The percentage of purification of the amount fully treated however, was 91 per cent, he added.

Turner's contention that more air is needed in the aeration tanks was substantiated by one of the Doerr company's own engineers last December who told Sotherland, he said, that double the amount of air being used at that time, which was 500 cubic feet per tank would be necessary to gain any material benefit.

It was pointed out that this is impossible with the present compressor equipment. The three compressors, Turner said, are capable of producing a total of 1,500 cubic feet of air, all of which is now being used.

The appointment of 125 schoolboy patrolmen who will guard 31 school crossings during the present semester, was announced today by Patrolman Frend C. Boals, supervisor of the schoolboy patrol.

Boals said the 125 boys represent two shifts at each school who are on duty every other week There duties consist of two hours of safety work each day while the other pupils are coming to and from school morning, noon and afternoon.

He said the two most dangerous intersections in the city where school children must cross daily are at Bowman street and Park avenue west and at West Fourth street on the Lincoln highway where an average of 6,000 automobiles pass every 24 hours.

CHAPTER 40

NOEL SAT silently thinking after Betsy had said that Fay Garwood was not her mother. For the first time Noel was beginning to believe Mrs. Garwood had been telling the truth when she had said that Betsy's mind was affected.

For a long time Noel sat there holding the child in her arms, without speaking. At last she said, "Betsy, you mustn't say things like that. You must promise me that you won't."

Betsy moved uneasily in Noel's arms. "All right, I'll promise you," she said unhappily.

"And you're sorry?" Noel coaxed.

There was a silence. Then Betsy's voice came plaintively, "I'm sorry if—if you want me to be"

"No, you must be sorry because you really are," Noel insisted.

"But I'm not—I hate her!" Betsy cried, another threat of hysteria in her voice.

Once again Noel was puzzled as to how to meet the situation "We won't talk about it any more, dear," she said gently.

Betsy seemed relieved She relaxed against Noel. After a moment she lifted her head and looked at Noel anxiously, "I'll try not to hate her, if—you won't go away"

Noel explained that if she went away it would only be for a little while "Promise? Promise, you'll come back?" Betsy urged in a trembling voice

"I'll come back. I give you my solemn promise," Noel told her.

The next day Noel almost wished she hadn't promised Laurie she would spend the night with her and come back to the Garwoods' early the next morning She wasn't sure she should leave Betsy that long And because the child clung to her, begging her pitifully to hurry back, it was late afternoon before Noel started to take advantage of her time off.

When she was downstairs, thinking it best to explain to Mrs. Garwood that she would return early in the morning, Noel started to knock on the door of the woman's sitting room. But she stopped, hearing angry voices inside "I tell you I'm sick of staying in this house," Fay Garwood exclaimed shrilly.

Noel stood there in surprise. Did Hichens have some strange, sinister influence over Fay Garwood? From his tone he seemed to be the one in authority.

Noel heard him moving toward the door then She stepped back, making it appear that she was just coming downstairs. When Hichens came out, she saw he had a book in his hand. It was "Correct English."

Evidently he didn't want her to see it for he put it quickly behind his back when he saw her standing there.

"I'm leaving," Noel told him "Please tell Mrs. Garwood I'll return early in the morning"

The butler's face was again impassive.

"Also, Hichens," Noel began, looking him straight in the eye, "if I have any more telephone calls from my friends, I want to receive them."

Hichens gave a start, then quickly recovered. "Very good, Miss," he said stiffly

It was nearly 6 o'clock when Noel reached the De Luxe. Laurie flashed her a quick smile "Oh, Noel, it's so good to see you. I've missed you like everything.

* * *

A few minutes later Noel saw Julian coming across the street. Her heart gave a lurch. It had been ages since she had seen him, she felt. She had almost forgotten how good-looking he was with that little incipient dimple in his strong chin, and his adorable smile.

Then he was standing before her, both her hands held between his. "How many centuries has it been?" he asked.

He turned to Laurie and spoke a word of greeting with the courtesy that was so much a part of him. "You're looking splendid Laurie," he said.

A minute later he and Noel faced each other across a table. Julian ordered two substantial meals. "You're ordering too much," Noel remonstrated. "How no earth can I eat all that?"

"You're going to eat it and like it," Julian said with mock severity. He was studying her face "Are you looking after yourself properly or shall I have to take steps about it?"

"What kind of steps?" she asked audaciously.

Julian shrugged a little. "Oh, I'd probably prescribe a big dose of castor oil and stand by and hold your nose until you swallowed it."

"Always the doctor," Noel scoffed Then she said, "Julian, we may not have much time, and I want to talk to you seriously." She began telling him then about the queer Garwood household, and some of the things that happened there which she could not understand Julian listened attentively. "I know of the family," he said. They're very prominent, wealthy people, belong to the real aristocracy."

"Aristocracy?" Noel questioned, feeling more bewildered

Julian thought a moment or so. "I'm beginning to remember things about them now Young Charlie Garwood was killed in an airplane accident a month before his child was born. When the child came, a friend of mine, an elderly doctor, was called on the case. After the child was old enough, Mrs. Garwood went to live abroad. She wanted to get far away from the tragedy, and said she could never bear to live in the ancestral Garwood home again. I understand she never really recovered from the shock of her husband's death. And I'm certain this is the first time she's been back since. The child must be about seven now, or possibly eight"

Noel nodded. "But Betsy seems actually to hate Mrs. Garwood. She even said she was not her mother"

Julian smiled understandingly. "Nervous children often have fancies like that The child is probably slightly abnormal She had a bad start in life, you know."

"Julian, I'm not sure I believe the child is Betsy Garwood. She seems normal in every way except when it comes to her mother. And then she becomes infuriated at the sight of her. There's something very peculiar about the people in that house, Julian," she finished earnestly.

Julian seemed impressed by her seriousness. Noel then told him about Hichens, whom she did not believe to be a butler at all. About Mrs. Garwood's bandaged arm, and the two checks she had had Noel write for her and sign. And yet Noel did not believe that her right hand was really injured since she had seen Mrs Garwood using it easily enough when playing cards. Still, it was possible that she could play cards with an injured hand and yet not be able to write with it.

"I'm trying to remember about the will," Julian observed "There was an awful lot of money, most of it coming from the paternal grandfather, young Charlie's father. I believe after Charlie's death, and following his father's death, which followed closely after, the money was left to the child under the grandfather's will"

"Then it belongs to Betsy?" Noel exclaimed. "Maybe," she went on thoughtfully, "Betsy isn't really the Garwood child The real Betsy might have died abroad, and Mrs Garwood and Hichens are pretending she is the heiress, so they still can have control of the money"

"That all depends on whether or not Mrs. Garwood would inherit in case of the child's death. If she only had control of the money while the child was alive, and it would revert, that is, most of it, to some of the close Garwood relatives—there might be something in what you say."

Julian was silent for a moment "On the other hand," he continued, "if she is to inherit after the child, she would have everything to gain by the child's death." Then he smiled and patted Noel's hand "It's probably your imagination working a little overtime. As I remember Mrs Garwood, she was a lovely lady and quite devoted to her husband and to her child"

Noel shook her head dubiously "There's another thing," she said "The child is not well. The reason is because she stays cooped up in one room so much. She seems actually frightened at the thought of going downstairs And there are times when I think she is feverish One of these evenings I'm going to yield to the temptation of slipping out of the house and bringing her to you"

"There is such a thing as ethics, my dear. If Mrs. Garwood doesn't want me for a doctor—"

"I don't care anything about ethics," Noel returned. "But I do care about Betsy. You'll know there's nothing the matter with her mind when you see her, but she does need a doctor."

They talked for about an hour, then Julian had to go back to the clinic. He knew Noel had planned to spend the night with Laurie. "I wonder," he began just before crossing the street, "If I could see you about 9, or even 10, just in case I can get through?"

"Of course," Noel smiled. "I'll be glad to wait"

"You see, Noel," Julian's face grew serious, "I have something important to tell you. Something that will affect our—our—"

Noel met his gaze, her eyes wide. "Our friendship?"

"Yes, decidedly," he admitted. When he crossed the street, an unhappy thought seized Noel Did Julian's news concern Ruth Chester?

GET COURT O. K.

Settlements in Two Accident Cases Approved by Judge.

Authority to accept settlements for damages resulting from two accidents in which a man was killed and a young woman was injured had been granted today by Judge C. J. Anderson in probate court.

Julius F. Sutter, administrator of the estate of Carl F. Remmy of Shelby, who was killed last December when a train struck the car in which he was riding, was authorized to accept $400 in settlement from the New York Central Railroad company. Remmy was killed at Crestline by a Big Four train.

Judge Anderson approved settlement of a $50 accident claim for injuries suffered by Miss Felice Walker of Mansfield in a traffic accident here last April 16. Joseph C. Kosper, who allegedly was responsible for the accident, agreed to pay the amount to Carl C. Walker, father of Miss Walker, a minor. Kosper was ordered to pay court costs amounting to $10.50.

FRACTIONAL HEALTH

John C. Davis, Druggist

To estimate the number of persons that know, through one or more manifestations, something is amiss in their bodies, and yet do nothing about it, would be merely hazarding a guess

Many conclude that they are at least eighty-five or ninety per cent healthy, and consider the fractional balance is not a matter of great concern, while, as a matter of fact, even a one per cent disorder may insidiously, or otherwise, increase to a degree where healing measures of the doctor of medicine are permanently hindered.

The joys of life are measured by the unmistakable exuberance of perfect health—not eighty-five or ninety per cent health

The one man who can aid you in the restoration of that ten or fifteen per cent is the efficient doctor of medicine; and you can help him in bringing about the desired condition by your careful choice of a druggist to fill his prescriptions—if medicine is necessary.

If all the conservatives are done away with who will do the paying?

A Marion girl cops the national beauty award—probably because the Mansfield girl you are thinking of didn't enter.

Professional golfers are complaining that they are poorly paid—which may be put aside to worry about at some more convenient time.

Consider Russian Workers' Plight.

THOSE who would overthrow or extensively change the capitalist system, use as their justification the common welfare—the well-being of the average man and woman.

In the light of that fact, some figures issued by the National Industrial Conference board concerning Russia, where practically all business is owned by the government, and where private capitalism is completely unknown, are of exceptional interest.

Based in terms of United States currency, the annual income of the average Soviet worker in 1937 was $582. In that year, if he lived in the typical city of Moscow, he would have had to pay $4.37 for a pound of coffee. A pound of tea cost $10.21. A pound of bacon cost $1.45. A pound of first quality butter cost $1.81. A pair of good leather shoes cost $34.85. A woolen sweater cost $41.80. A cheap cotton shirt cost $7.74. One yard of heavy woolen cloth cost $29.26.

How did the worker buy these excessively priced commodities out of his pitifully small income? The answer is simple—he didn't. Things that are regarded as the commonest necessities of life by any workman in this country, are untouchable luxuries to the Russian worker. The soviet standard of living is unbelievably low.

Chicken Thieves Start Destructive Fire.

RICHLAND county's fifteenth traffic death for the year was an indirect result of a fire which destroyed a large barn west of Shelby Saturday night, which was apparently a direct result of chicken thievery that has been going on in that vicinity for some time past.

After discovery of the fire, which resulted in loss of thousands of dollars, it was also discovered that thieves had put a number of chickens in sacks, in readiness to make off with them, when a carelessly handled match or cigaret started the destructive blaze.

A sheriff and a few deputies are obviously unable to cope with the problem of protecting farm property all over the county against thievery and other depredations.

Just how farmers had best go about it to protect their own belongings deserves consideration. A good watch dog, of a breed that shows efficiency in dealing with night prowlers, sometimes accomplishes the desired purpose.

On some occasions a shotgun, in the hands of a farmer schooled in its use, has also been found an efficient deterrent of thievery—with an added advantage that the small particles of lead sometimes serve to associate the culprit with the crime, or to lead to his detection.

Such occurrences as that of Saturday night should not be classed among minor offenses. Every possible effort should be made by the sheriff's office and the state fire marshal's office to follow through to apprehension and punishment of guilty person or persons—who must be held morally guilty of causing one death, in addition to being legally responsible for the heavy property loss entailed by the fire.

Old Promissory Note Pops Up.

DANGER involved in "going on a note" for a friend is being demonstrated to a Mansfield man who tells of being notified recently that a promissory note which he signed as surety nine years ago was not paid, and that he will be required to pay the face of the note, plus interest.

One bad thing about a promissory note given to an individual as evidence of indebtedness, is that it may lie under cover for years and then suddenly show up for collection with interest, after a responsible surety has forgotten all about it.

Experience has taught many people that signing as surety on a note, to accommodate a friend, is a costly practice that should be avoided. Instances have been related in which life savings have been wiped out as a result of sureties being required to pay notes.

Loan money to a friend—if you can afford to lose it—but don't sign as surety on a promissory note, unless you are perfectly willing to pay the face of the note, with interest.

Europe's Little Powers.

ONE of the many disheartening things about the situation in Europe is the way the springs of normal, civilized life are being poisoned in the small countries. They are driven to copy the big powers, although they may be neutral, with their neutrality "guaranteed." They cannot trust all of the guarantors.

So Switzerland mobilizes and drills and stores food in unheard-of places against a time of siege. Troops and tanks and armored trucks parade at The Hague, traditional home of peace. The Scandinavian countries build forts and raise their military budgets. And in the nest of little Central European countries is a fierce ferment.

So rapidly proceeds decivilization. So great is the power for harm wielded by a few men.

Scholarly Flyers.

AIR TRAVELERS often notice the unusual quality of pilots, as shown by their manners, speech and range of information, but the fact is easily explained. It appears that a large majority of them are college men, and others usually have considerable education and culture. High standards are demanded.

A high degree of character, also, seems to go with flying. Consider that aviator, who, knowing he was going to crack, managed to steer his plane down a straight street, away from houses and playing children. He landed, near death, in the hospital but the children and their homes are safe.

It may be assumed that the $30-every-Thursday pension plan will take account of holidays falling on that day of the week—so that checks will be available a day earlier on those occasions. It's always so easy to overlook such details.

Watching Trends

While Preston Grover is on vacation, persons prominent in the official and political life of the nation and in journalism are conducting this column. Today's guest column is written

By ROBERT FECHNER
Director, Civilian Conservation Corps.

WASHINGTON — Initiation of the Civilian Conservation corps program has provided the nation with a brand new and extremely useful force for saving life and property in emergencies, such as floods, forest fires, hurricanes, severe storms and accidents.

Activities of this character, with the exception of forest fire fighting, were not included in the original program of work activities for the corps. However, the wide distribution of the CCC camps and the facility with which enrollee units could be mobilized for quick action made it inevitable that the CCC would be called upon for aid whenever communities adjacent to CCC camps urgently needed outside help in emergencies.

This CCC land life saving service has steadily increased in importance since the corps was established in the spring of 1933 for the advancement of conservation and the improvement of youth. Today, in addition to conducting its normal youth training and conservation program, the corps each year answers thousands of emergency calls, saves millions of dollars worth of property and averts the loss of many lives.

The Modern Minute Men.

IN A WORD, the corps, thanks to the wide distribution of its 1,500 camps, its well-trained organization, its strategically located supplies of foodstuffs, clothing and working tools, and its will to serve, has become a highly important cog in the nation's emergency relief and rehabilitation machinery.

Indicative of the importance of the humanitarian activities of the corps are official figures disclosing that to date enrollees have expended more than 5,000,000 man-days on emergency activities such as floods, hurricanes, forest fires or accidents. Each year the 300,000 men of the corps spent more than a million man-days combatting floods and forest fires, conducting rescue, relief and rehabilitation work, searching for lost children, rescuing persons from drowning and answering other calls for aid.

The corps rendered valiant service during and after the Mississippi and Louisiana tornadoes in 1935; the severe eastern floods in 1935 and 1936; the Mississippi-Ohio river valley floods of 1937, the New London, Texas, school explosion in 1937 and the wreck of the Hindenburg the same year. Led by reserve officers and members of the camp supervisory forces, enrollees have performed heroic service in saving motorists, ranchers and livestock caught by snow storms in the west. They have participated in searches for lost airliners. In numerous cases they have given vitally important first aid and other help to motorists after accidents.

CCC to the Rescue.

THE aid given during the disastrous Mississippi-Ohio floods of January and February, 1937, marked the high point of all CCC emergency activities. At the height of that emergency, more than 22,000 enrollees, hundreds of reserve officers and technical personnel, and in excess of 2,000 trucks were engaged in relief, rescue and rehabilitation work under the supervision of the American Red Cross.

Enrollees moved marooned families to points of safety, carried on rescue work, transported supplies, aided in the construction and strengthening of levees, guarded public buildings and bridges, constructed emergency routes of transportation, aided in the maintenance of communication systems and prepared CCC camps for use in housing refugees.

During this emergency, clothing, equipment and miscellaneous supplies to the value of $4,319,576 over and above the normal operating expenses of the corps were expended on flood activities by the corps.

In its first five years, the corps spent more than 50,000 man-days searching for missing persons. On one occasion an 8-year-old girl became lost while picking huckleberries. Her father, assisted by the other berry pickers, searched for her for two hours and then called the CCC camp at Ukiah, Ore., to ask for help. Twenty-five enrollees went to the rescue. They found the little girl alive at the foot of a mountain some six miles from where she became lost.

The CCC camps in the vicinity of Fort Douglas, Utah, rescued 100 persons, cleared more than 1,100 miles of roads and saved the lives of 200,000 head of livestock during severe snow storms in the winter of 1936-37.

As a part of its safety program, the CCC in cooperation with the American Red Cross, has given Red Cross swimming and life saving instruction to thousands of camp officials and enrollees.

By order of President Roosevelt, 24 enrollees have been awarded the certificate of valor, the highest CCC award, in recognition of "exceptionally courageous action in service."

THERE'S ONE BIG OBSTACLE

The Human Side of the News

—By EDWIN C. HILL

THE "time capsule," made of cupaloy, will be sunk in the New York World's Fair grounds to tell future ages about our civilization. The new microfilm, by which this newspaper page may be condensed to something like the bulk of an aspirin tablet, flared out to full legibility when needed, will thus embalm our civilization for the enlightenment of any future age which may be interested.

I suppose they could have condensed the entire library of Alexandria in a few of these seven-foot, time-resisting capsules. The burning of the library of 700,000 volumes, by command of Theodosius in 398, A. D., was a major disaster of history. With Rome and Antioch, Alexandria was one of the noblest cities of antiquity. It was the seat of a great civilization, built in the steady cultural advance after the conquest by Alexander the Great in 332 B. C. Here were the great forums of the philosophers, the arcana of the poets, not unlike our basement cafes, and here were the men and works of art, science, literature and beautiful craftsmanship.

The library in the Temple of Serapis, called the "Great Library," to distinguish it from the "Daughter Library," previously destroyed, was unique in that age, the only comprehensive record of a great civilization and a great culture anywhere in the world. Slowly it had been built, under such great librarians as Zenodotus, Aristarchus, Columachus and Rhodius. It was the lodestone of scholarship, the Greek capital of Egypt, drawing learned men from everywhere, a far-shining light in its oasis in the darkness of a barbaric world.

THIS writer could never get it quite clear as to whether it was Theodocius or the Calif Omar who was directly responsible for its burning. At any rate, Omar was reported to have said, "If it agrees with the Koran, it is useless, and if it doesn't it ought to be destroyed." There was the inexorable logic of the righteous man, the convinced and pious man who knows that he and no other has the truth. This conviction of righteousness has destroyed other priceless treasures of human culture—the records of the great Mayan civilization, for instance.

The tragic loss of these age-old gleanings of beauty and truth has sunk deeply into the race consciousness, as the centuries pass. It is interesting to note that the Odes of Sappho seem to be mourned more than anything else. It is possible, quite probable, in fact, that we have more than regained any scientific knowledge lost in the burning of the library. But the "thing of beauty" never can be replaced.

KIPLING'S KING, building his palace, found the ruins of another royal palace, deep in the earth. He thrust the stones ruthlessly aside and built boldly and well, but "They sent me word from the darkness, they said the use is fulfilled; thy palace shall stand as that other, the spoil of a king who shall build."

The King bowed to destiny. "All I had wrought I abandoned to the faith of the faithless years. But I cut on every timber, I carved on every stone, 'After me cometh a builder; tell him I too have known'."

Zenodotus, one of the Alexandria librarians of great wisdom and learning, had a keen zest for knowledge, and he and others of his day pretty clearly understood the spirit of scientific research. Our World's Fair time capsule, doubtless, would supply him with the answers to many questions which baffled the world of his day. But there is one question to which we supply no answer and which, no doubt, will be relayed down through many ages to come, perhaps to the end, bobbing up at intervals in Time's microfilm suspense file. "What is truth?" Our capsule will not either ask or answer.

COIN HARVEY, he of the free silver pamphlets which almost elected Bryan, spent his declining years building a great pyramid in which he entombed the "wrong guesses" of our civilization, at his home in Massillon, O. Being a reformer and pamphleteer, he had more assurance about right and wrong than most of us. Every civilization which ever rose, anywhere on the planet, has been overwhelmed by people who knew they were right—Sumeria, all the Greek states, Alexandria, Rome and all the rest.

The Calif Omar, decreeing the end of all in dissent to his religion, was historically in type. Perhaps our time capsule shouldn't be quite so cocksure as Coin Harvey's. Our balance-brought-forward might well carry a micro-film essay on humility.

Vanishing Canes.

It is to be supposed that the use of canes originated with those who were halt or lame or blind. But there came a day when to use a walking stick was the height of fashion. Of course there was in the day when people really walked. The gold-headed cane for many years was the symbol of distinguished honor.

The old-fashioned dude always had his walking stick, and one of the favorite drawings of the comic cartoonists was that of a Cholly with the head of the cane in his mouth. There were those who collected canes just as others collect coins, stamps, buttons and tags.

But Frank Jager, Washington maker of canes for every chief executive beginning with Grover Cleveland, is going out of business. He complains that the cane manufacturing and repairing business just doesn't carry on any more.

The facts are no one has time to be bothered with a cane. Leisurely strolling is a thing of the past. Unless actually needed as a support the cane was a useless affectation. —Ohio State Journal.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say Rejoice.—Philippians 4:4.

Listen, World!

"But I Didn't Mean It!"

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

"BUT I DIDN'T MEAN IT!" you cry, genuinely aghast at some careless act.

Yes, you did! I know it's hard to take but it's true. You did what you did because you meant to do it . . . planned to do it . . . chose to do it.

"Why, how abominably unfair!" you flame. "I never dreamed of doing such a stupid thing . . . it never entered my mind—"

And again the only answer is—STOP FOOLING YOURSELF! That act not only entered your mind but it had been living there for months, perhaps years, before you committed it!

THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS AN UNPREMEDITATED ACT . . . OR AN ACCIDENTAL ACT . . . OR AN UNINTENTIONAL ACT. EVERYTHING WE DO HAS ROOTS WHICH STRETCH BACK AND BACK, SOMETIMES TO THE BEGINNINGS OF OUR LIVES.

No act is isolated. No act has just one motive behind it. Every act is composed of countless desires and decisions, impressions and reactions. A man may kill a strange woman at sixty because he hated his sister's pink hair ribbon at six. That seems absurd, doesn't it? Yet a definite chain would connect that ribbon and that murder—a chain of seemingly unimportant acts . . . too trivial even to carry in one's conscious memory.

Actually, no act is trivial or unimportant. Everything you say or think—has a definite relationship to every other act in your life. And nothing is ever lost in your life, nothing is ever forgotten. Everything, little or big, is stored within the mysterious reaches of your spirit and leaves its inevitable mark on your record and your character.

But you still don't see why you made that rude remark to the clever authoress you'd just met . . . and you, with your cherished reputation for diplomacy! Naturally, I don't know why you did it either but I can give you a theoretical answer!

We'll start thirty years ago, when you were a three-year-old tyke with a sister four years older. Such a wonderful sister—how you adored and envied her! For, where your hair hung in pale strings, hers was a fluff of copper curls. And where you were paralyzed with shyness in public, she was gay as a chickadee . . . always laughing, chattering, dancing her way into everyone's heart.

So, though you were inseparable, there was a vague hurt and bewilderment in your young heart. Looking back, you can hardly remember that period, it passed so quickly. With school days, and your own special fun and friends, it was over. Forgotten. Or was it?

No, it wasn't. All those thirty years, that old hurt has been festering in your mind, unrecognized—seemingly finished. Yet every now and then lashing out in some odd, "unintentional" act. In that catty remark to the brilliant young writer today; in your queer and hitherto unexplained dislike for henna or rust-colored materials, your irritation at chatterers.

A baby's envy of a pretty older sister lashing out at a strange woman's superior charm and wit. And "you didn't mean it"? But can't you see, now, that you were "meaning it"—getting ready for it, for thirty years . . .

Maybe that hypothetical case fits you, maybe it doesn't. But if you want an interesting adventure, try this. Take any random act you commit . . . and begin to trace its course, find its source. It'll be a job, I warn you . . . and a test of both honesty and courage. But stick to it! See what really made you do the thing you "didn't mean to do."

But if that's how we're made, what's the answer? Seemingly simple. Never let yourself feel that anything "doesn't matter" . . . never let your slightest word or gesture pass without a challenge. Watch the begining of any careless habit . . . check its consequences. . .

THEN HAND YOURSELF THE BILL! YOU'LL BE SURPRISED! AND MAYBE WISER NEXT TIME!

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Where the Woodbine Twineth.

Shakespeare knew a bank "quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine;" but that is not what made the phrase famous.

We owe the line to Jim Fiske, maladorous financier, securities racketeer and stock-jobber of the 1870's, against whose notorious juggling and manipulations public feeling ran high.

Quizzed once as to what had become of a certain issue of shares with which his name was closely associated—though this fact was concealed by its sponsors,—he replied unconcernedly:

"It is gone where the woodbine twineth."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Fifteen years is a long time. People change. Towns grow into cities. It does something to you that you can never quite undo.

I was thinking of that today. It has been just 15 years since I made my first trip to New York. It was Fall. It was the night "The Student Prince" had its Broadway premiere, and I was there. By some curious chance I was drawn into the maw of that great theater where so many top hats and ermine wraps were moving in an endless, or so it seemed, stream. Jimmy Walker was there. He was the mayor of New York then.

And Al Smith was governor. Calvin Coolidge was in the White House, and Jack Dempsey was a lithe panther who could whip any man in the world. He had just knocked out Firpo. Tex Rickard was king of the promoters.

THOSE were the days of prohibition and Tex Guinan was queen of the speakeasies. There was a speak on West 40th just off Seventh where you could get a marvelous Italian dinner and a bottle of wine for a small sum.

In those days there was no Empire State building, and the old Waldorf, with its fabulous Peacock alley, was the most famous promenade in the western hemisphere. In the rialto theaters a young woman was just coming into all the great things her earlier career had promised. Her name was Helen Hayes.

Legs Diamond was alive. Arnold Rothstein, the gambler, had not then been brought to the dust in an affair of pistols that, even now, remains unsolved. Women wore horrible dresses with waist lines that caught them low at the hips. There were no talking pictures.

I WAS thinking of all those things today, and the things 15 years can do to a town, or a man, or a vogue. The town doesn't swagger with powerful Tammany Sachems anymore. And Jimmy Walker is in moody retirement. Gone is the old Waldorf. Legs Diamond is dead. Arnold Rothstein is dead. Tex Guinan is dead. There is no prohibition and no speaks—at least, not as we knew them then.

I saw Jack Dempsey for a few minutes today. He too reminded me of what 15 years can do. Gone is the savage litheness that characterized "the tiger of the ring." He was well dressed, a contented, well-fed, happily married man. He has a business and a family.

Since Jack was king of the heavies there have been seven champions.

If you prowl the summer theaters no doubt you will run into "The Student Prince." It is an annual revival somewhere. But on Broadway you will not see its like for a long, long time. For it was a romantic valentine operetta, and Broadway is tired of that sort of thing. It is "out-moded."

Tex Rickard, with his inevitable cigar and his shirt sleeves, is gone. In his place has come Mike Jacobs to monopolize the promotion interests. No trace of that West 40th street speak remains. The ladies still wear their dresses short, but not those old time low hip lines. And the gangs have largely been busted up.

Fifteen years is a long time. People change. Towns grow into cities. It does something to you that you can never quite undo.

A Farmer's Diary

The Old Steam Engine.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MID-SEPTEMBER, and seeding time well in progress, yet I found on a short trip into the hilly section fifty miles from home, that many farmers had not yet threshed. They had hauled the wheat and oats into the barn, to keep it safe and dry, until threshing was convenient.

On one steep hillside, I saw where a farmer had hauled his wagon up and started down the middle of the narrow field. To keep his load from running wildly down the hill, had tied a log chain from the lower beam of the rigging, with a loop about the fellows in such a manner that the knot was directly under the wheel. This rough lock brake made a furrow straight down the slope, as deep as if a plow had stirred the soil. From both sides of the field, the shocks of grain were carried on pitchforks.

"Surely this is marginal land," I thought, "and should have been kept in forest."

Back of one unpainted barn, roofed long ago with home-made oak lap shingles, stood an old steam threshing engine. The top of the smokestack was large, and rested like a great, inverted cone, upon the lower pipe. The huge, cleated, rear wheels stood high, with heavy wooden spokes. The graceful fly wheel turned the belt with ease, while jets of steam escaped with each back and forward movement of the piston. A pile of coal was heaped beside the engine. A team drew up with a dripping tank of water.

"How long have you run this engine?" I asked the thresher.

"Nigh all my life. I was 18 when Pap let me have 'er, an' now I'm 65. She's never failed me." He stroked the shiny throttle with a twinkle in his blue eyes. "If I had all the stuff this little engine threshed, I'd be wuth a million," he added, rubbing a huge rough hand across his graying beard. "Mine's the only rig in this neighborhood. Run 'er every season from August to November. Threshed for the old folks, then for their kids . . . now for their grandchildren. Time keeps rollin' along, but this here is some engine! Reckon she'll do me the rest o' my working days."

Staying Nineteen.

"I would like to stay nineteen,"
Said my daughter Sue,
"Have my life all gaiety,
Always something new."

"Then," I told her, "you would miss
All the best, the days
Of the ripening of years,
Life itself. Dull ways

You must travel, but your grief,
Even that will bring
Something you would not exchange
At last for anything."

SUDETENS HURL HOT ULTIMATUM

Answer Czech Martial Law Decree With Demand for Lifting of Order.

of crisis.

The first emergency cabinet meeting of the week was that of yesterday, a few hours before Hitler spoke.

A wave of disorders in Czechoslovakia, which caused eight deaths, resulted in the government imposing martial law in eight Sudeten German districts.

Most of the disturbances occurred during the night and in the early morning before martial law was ordered, the most serious being at Aussig, Graslitz and Kaaden, all Sudeten strongholds.

The dead included four Sudetens, a Czech soldier, two policemen and a Czech civilian.

Widespread minor disturbances resulted in a number of persons being injured. Instances of Sudetens attacking public buildings and crossing the frontier into Germany added to the worries of the government.

Military rule was applied to Falkenau, Bohemisch-Kermau, Karlovy Vary, Elbogen, Eger, Neudeck, Pressnitz and Kaaden, all Sudeten strongholds.

A responsible government source said the government would extend martial law to all other Sudeten areas and throughout the entire republic if necessary to preserve order. (That was before the Sudeten ultimatum.)

Tanks from a nearby garrison rumbled through the streets of Eger, less than ten miles from the German border, where frenzied celebrations took place following Hitler's Nurnberg speech. The Sudetens in Eger and other towns in the border areas acclaimed yesterday as "the Sudetens' day of joy."

Shops were closed and work abandoned in the Sudeten areas. Celebrations reached their climax in the raising of a large swastika, display of which is illegal, on the Eger city hall flagpole.

Germans Sing, Parade.

Until the tanks came joyful Germans cheered, paraded and sang folksongs in inns. "The day of deliverance is at hand," was heard on all sides.

In Prague authorities expressed growing concern over the turbulence in the border areas. Premier Milan Hodza and President Eduard Benes kept close touch with the situation.

Several members of the Sudeten German party negotiation committee rushed to Eger to investigate the situation. Hence it appeared there would be no renewal in Prague of the Sudeten negotiations with the government.

This was later confirmed when Sudeten German leaders declared almost simultaneously with the announcement of the ultimatum, that all negotiations with the Czechoslovak government for settlement of their bitter, bloody dispute had been broken off.

While the government's action was described as martial law, officials made it clear troops would not step in unless police and civil authorities were unable to maintain order. It also was made clear that persons arrested would be tried in civil rather than military courts.

The death penalty for disturbers of the peace was ordered and an emergency civil court machinery was being set up in the Sudeten communities under martial law. The army was ordered to protect the extraordinary courts.

Hanging Mandatory.

Under the emergency laws, a commission of four judges would have power to impose the death penalty. A unanimous decision by the commission would make hanging mandatory within two hours after the sentence was pronounced.

Persons condemned to death for political disturbances were entitled to appeal to the president for clemency, but there was to be no extension of the two-hour period before execution.

The commission of judges was to move from town to town, accompanied by a priest, doctor, executioner and the latter's assistants.

The belief was widely held here that "while there is no war now, the trouble is just beginning."

JAIL 3 SUSPECTS IN PASSING OF FAKE $10 BILLS

Police Round Up Trio After Obtaining Description From Merchant.

Less than two hours after counterfeit bills had been discovered by Mansfield merchants yesterday, detectives had taken into custody three suspects accused of peddling the fake money.

Detectives Lee J. Remy and Oscar Krupp rounded up the trio after one of the merchants who had cashed one of the bills gave them a description of the man.

The officers said that two brothers, one a Columbus man, had apparently brought the fake notes into Mansfield and were "working" through a Mansfield man whom they said he did not know that the bills were counterfeit.

Implicates Two.

Remy and Krupp said they had obtained a statement from the man who had been the "tool" through his interpreter in which he implicated the other two whom he had known for the past several years.

He told the officers that he and one of the brothers had made a visit to five different merchants Sunday night and that at each place he was given a $10 bill to pay for the merchandise. He said he then turned the change over to his friend.

All three are being held for investigation by department of justice agents.

ONE of the first musical events of the season in Mansfield was the meeting last night of the Singers club before which a group of Cleveland artists performed. The affair was a covered-dish dinner at North Lake park pavilion given for members of the club and their families.

The guests, known as the Colonial Singers and a part of a Mothersingers group, presented a musical costume recital. For the opening selection a colonial episode was given with the group singing and dancing the minuet. Mrs. George W. Hall, Singers club accompanist, presented two piano solos during the intermission.

An oriental number followed, with all the seductive charm of the East giving a living picture of a Persian market place with the snake charmer in her royal blue and gold, the princess in yellow satin and the tumbling and fawning beggar portrayed by Robert Fletcher.

The ever popular Volga boatmen were depicted in the Russian musical picture. David Ireland entertained during the intermission with a humorous sketch. A fair scene followed with the artists appearing in picture hats and crinoline, waltzing to the Blue Danube Waltz, and listening to the prince sing "Song of Love" from "Blossom Time." The finale was a presentation from the musical "Maytime."

The dinner was served at a U-shaped table decorated with pastel flowers. Director of the group was Mrs. Vera Newstead Rowley. Mrs. Edith Fletcher Jameson is the director of the Singers club.

Guest artists were Frank Schwemler, Anita Bollinghorst, Glendora Ralerono, Blanche Zipp, Bessie Beudies, Frances Peterson, Florence Farrel, Mabel Sherman, Marie Jaseman, Hilda Lannert and Blossom Van Bergen. The troup, which has performed before a variety of organizations this summer, comes from Cleveland.
